

Who We Are

Environmental Health Perspectives (EHP) is a monthly peer-reviewed journal of research and news on the interrelationships between the environment and human health. Published since 1972, EHP went online-only in January 2013. EHP is open access, and all content is available for free online.

What We Publish

EHP IS RESEARCH—EHP publishes articles from a wide range of scientific disciplines encompassing basic research, human studies, and in vitro and in vivo research with a clear relationship to human health effects. Highly represented research areas include epidemiology, toxicology, exposure science, risk assessment, public health, and climate change. Each issue includes a section devoted to children's health research.

EHP IS NEWS—Each month EHP News explores current events, emerging issues, and trends in environmental health. News articles offer groundbreaking feature reporting as well as user-friendly summaries of Research articles. The Researcher's Perspective podcast series provides an archive of behind-the-scenes looks at the Research and News published in EHP and its human health implications.

EHP IS GLOBAL—Selected EHP content is republished in Chinese, French, and Spanish. In 2012 33% of papers accepted for publication in EHP were from corresponding authors residing outside the United States.

For Authors

EHP has an overall acceptance rate of 15%, and approximately one-third of all submissions are selected for peer review. Research articles are published within 3 working days of acceptance as Advance Publication articles and are citable using the CrossRef DOI (Digital Object Identifier) system.
