

Who We Are

Environmental Health Perspectives (EHP) is a monthly peer-reviewed journal of research and news on the interrelationships between the environment and human health. As an open-access journal, all EHP content is available free online.

What We Publish

EHP IS RESEARCH—EHP publishes articles from a wide range of scientific disciplines encompassing basic research, human studies, and in vitro and in vivo research with a clear relationship to human health effects. Highly represented research areas include epidemiology, toxicology, exposure science, risk assessment, public health, and climate change. Each issue also includes a section devoted to children's health research.

EHP IS NEWS—Each month EHP News explores current events, emerging issues, and trends in environmental health. News articles offer groundbreaking reporting on emerging topics such as obesogens, stress–pollution interactions, the exposome, public health issues related to fracking, and ecosystem services. The Researcher's Perspective podcast series provides a behind-the-scenes look at the research and news published in EHP and its human health implications.

EHP IS GLOBAL—Selected EHP content is republished in Chinese, French, Spanish, and Portuguese. In 2010 37% of papers published in EHP were from corresponding authors residing outside the United States. EHP is read in more than 219 countries.

For Authors

EHP has an overall acceptance rate of 15%, and approximately one-third of all submissions are selected for peer review. Research articles are published within 24 hours of acceptance as Advance Publication articles and are completely citable using the CrossRef DOI (Digital Object Identifier) system.
